Iris Almaraz is a badass filmmaker who has been based out of East LA, CA for almost two decades. After receiving her BFA in Cinema from San Francisco State Iris' first short film made its premiere at the top-tier international film Festival in Rotterdam. Her 30k feature film "Delusions of Grandeur" debuted at Cinequest with an encore sold-out screening. The LA premiere at the Mann's Chinese Theater sold out before the Dances With Films festival began (a festival first). In 2013 the film was listed as a top-five Latino film pick by festival programmers. This international award-winning filmmaker's unabashed embrace of urban feminine sexuality from a working-class woman of color's perspective is unique to her voice which doesn't apologize or attempt to educate. It merely illuminates. Search: @irisalmaraz
